Junior high school students, divided into groups for a class assignment, give presentations on how they think a section of nature might express itself in relation to manmade climate change, if personified or anthropomorphized. Things are relatively tame until Jamal and his group give his Pissed Off As Fckn’ Hell Fish presentation. This is an elaborate and choreographed Hip Hop interpretation of swimming around fish poised to band together to seriously fckup the asshe mthrfckrs fckn up they ocean, like WHO the FCK! Class members who aren’t part of the presentation find themselves involuntarily joining in, the collective anger intensifying particularly when the teacher joins in and lets loose. After Jamal, the tame presentations resume.
